Consider yourself a foodie? When you visit a new destination and you're looking to dine on the finest, most exciting local cuisine, your hotel restaurant might, therefore, be at the bottom of your bucket list. But those days are gone – new hotels are increasingly focusing on their culinary offerings, and many existing hotels are revamping their restaurants and bars. It's a foodie-globetrotter dream. Looking for somewhere to start? Here is the C&TH selection of hotels for foodies.

Hostal de la Gavina – Girona, Spain

Perfectly positioned between Barcelona and the Costa Brava, Girona is a hidden gem among Spain's better known cities. The culinary capital of Catalonia, the region holds an impressive 19 Michelin stars – a must-visit for foodies on the hunt for aromatic local sausage, freshly caught seafood, and platters of seasonal tapas.

At Hostal de la Gavina, Michelin-starred Chef Romain Fornell is helping to put Girona firmly on the map, overseeing the hotel's three restaurants – including Candlelight, renowned for its exquisite haute cuisine, served either in the elegant dining room or on a pretty terrace, with a live pianist adding to the romantic ambiance. The hotel is ideal for foodies, also hosting a gastronomy festival every Autumn. In its sixth year, 2022's festival will see Chef Joel Castanyé – a rising star on the Catalan cuisine scene – take residency. lagavina.com
